HLAA01C Language variation 1 English linguistics and phonology

Mots-clés	Commentary, linguistics, discourse analysis, phonetics, phonology
Contenu de l'enseignement	Mme Pillière: This course is an introduction to linguistic commentary. The aim will be to consolidate students' knowledge in linguistics but also to teach them how to write a commentary. A number of grammatical forms and concepts will be studied in context such as negation, -ing, adjectives, the simple past and the present perfect. Mme Herment: The course will first focus on the difference between phonetics and phonology, and will be based on the IPA (International Phonetic Alphabet) for this purpose. The English language and its phonological system will thus be placed in perspective with the languages of the world, in order to better understand how they function and to distinguish the phonological system from phonetic variations. We will then be able to work on phonemic transcription and phonetic transcription, with a view to agrégation.

HLAAU04 Littérature 1 – Récits de vie 1 : articulating history and the present in postmodernist fiction

Mots-clés	Études culturelles, études anglophones, méthodologie
Contenu de l'enseignement	This seminar examines the concept of the postmodern which was developed in the 1980s, its various, sometimes divergent definitions and approaches, with a view to looking more particularly at the way it articulates the slippery notion of history. We'll start from Michel Foucault's concept of "genealogy" to replace history, and move on to Fredric Jameson's views on the "postmodern condition". Linda Hutcheon's concept of historiographic metafiction will be connected to postmodernism, and to the works of historians, in particular Hayden White's. The various tenets of postmodernist fiction will also be reviewed, with the help of Brian McHale's and Patricia Waugh's works. For this introductory part on the theory of postmodernism, you will be handed extracts from theoretical sources, which we will discuss during our seminar sessions. They will be made available on Ametice, or downloadable from the university library database. The seminar will then focus more specifically on two landmark postmodernist novels, Graham Swift's Waterland (1983) and Alasdair Gray's Lanark, a Life in Four Books (1981). With Swift's novel, we'll focus more particularly (but not exclusively) on time, history, memory, the articulation of history and myth, history as narrative, focusing on how the historical narrative is constructed (using Hayden White's concept of metahistory). This will lead us to metafiction, more specifically historiographic metafiction (Waugh), and back to a re-appraisal of basic descriptive concepts of the ways we have of telling a story such as mimesis (Aristotle) and fabulation (Scholes). The study of the temporal and narrative structure of the novel will be connected to these issues. Alasdair Gray's Lanark also looks at history; it tackles the problems linked with what historian of literature Cairns Craig calls "historilessness", a gap in the national imagination (B. Anderson). We'll look at the novel's problematic rendering of time (and space), of the present's uneasy relation with the past, and at the various strategies of representation of the present and the past, as the novel makes ample use of such postmodernist devices as metalepsis (Genette), frame-breaking (McHale), temporal dislocation or forking paths. All those foreground history as a gap to be filled in a specific Scottish context. Special attention will also be paid to the very abundant paratextual and intertextual apparatus, which will lead us to the idea of overkill and its purpose. Please procure a paper copy of the novel, so you can have all the illustrations, frontispieces and other paratextual elements.

HLAAU06 Linguistique 1 : grammaire et phonétique : de la recherche à l'enseignement 1

Mots-clés	Grammaire, linguistique, phonétique, phonologie, didactique de la grammaire et de la phonétique
Contenu de l'enseignement	Pour les présentiels et uniquement pour l'année 2021-2022, le cours ne sera assuré que par Mme Herment et ne comprendra que de la phonétique. Phonetics: The course will deal with phonetics and phonology in the framework of English as a foreign language (EFL). We will see what research can contribute to the teaching of phonetics/phonology. It is the heart of the profession of the university lecturer to do research that can be applied to teaching. The first part of the course will focus on the methodology of collecting oral corpora, on which much research in phonetics/phonology is based. The second part of the course will consist in focusing on the main difficulties encountered by francophones speaking English and showing examples of pedagogical applications based on these oral corpora. In the third part of the course, students will be asked to set up a corpus themselves and present an analysis of this corpus for educational purposes.
Niveau de l'enseignement	C2
Nombre de crédits	3
Compétences à acquérir	The grammar and phonetics courses, based on valorization, imitation and repetition, then on the student's own explanation of the point studied (reverse pedagogy), aim to facilitate the learning of grammar and phonetics/phonology for transmission and research purposes.

HLAAU07 Littérature 2, littérature et altérité 1
Racial Issues in American Culture : from Text to Screen

Mots-clés	American literature, adaptation, intersectionality.
Contenu de l'enseignement	In this course, we study the treatment of racial issues in American literature through the lens of their screen adaptations (film and television). Special emphasis is placed on the modifications introduced in the screen versions that may discredit or indeed justify the very process of adapting the source texts: the temptation to overfictionalize racial issues when adapting the literary work, and the addition of an intersectional perspective in the screen version. The range of works under study spans from plainly racist works (The Clansman) to abolitionist literature (Uncle Tom's Cabin). The corpus also includes, among others, Huckleberry Finn , The Color Purple , and Beloved .
Niveau de l'enseignement	C1
Nombre de crédits	3
Compétences à acquérir	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Ability to conduct a comparative analysis of a text and its screen adaptation. - Ability to gauge the assets and liabilities of screen adaptation to study socio-historical issues. - Ability to study a precise aspect of American literature from a diachronic perspective and to assess its place in cultural history.

HLAAU08 Civilisation 2, Migrations: A Nation of Immigrants and a Gate-keeping Nation

Mots-clés	Migrations ; circulations ; migration policies ; United States
Contenu de l'enseignement	« A Nation of Immigrants... and a Gatekeeping Nation » This course aims at analyzing the key principles, mechanisms and paradoxes guiding this prominent aspect of American identity and history. Although focusing on the latter part of the 20th century and current times, it will also draw from earlier times to highlight deeply entrenched reactions and policies. Who migrates to America and why? What are the paradoxes of U.S. migration policies? What does 'assimilation' imply in a so-called multicultural society? What are the current challenges? These are some of the issues this course will seek to address.

HLABU05 Traductologie / Translation studies: Theory and Practice

Mots-clés	Translation theory and practice, history of translation, translation studies, interculturality
Contenu de l'enseignement	This course focuses on landmarks in Western translation theory and practice in their historical, literary and cultural context. Beginning with the burgeoning of translation studies in the 1970s, it will rewind to the early translations of the Bible and work forwards through the major translations and translation theories that paved the way for the new discipline during the preceding centuries, with particular attention to the relationship between translation and culture. New developments in translation studies, such as transcultural translation or self-translation will also be considered. Teaching includes lectures, textual study and creative exercises, in which students select their own source texts – possibly excerpts they are studying for their T.E.R. dissertations – and experiment with different approaches and strategies.

HLABU06 Littérature 3, récits de vie 2 :
Paul Auster or the ever-recommencing autobiographical project

Mots-clés	Literature, autobiography, Paul Auster, self-writing
Contenu de l'enseignement	This course will focus on the work of Paul Auster. Although he is essentially known as a novelist, his whole work can be seen as deeply autobiographical, not simply because it uses autobiographical elements but because it originates in a self-writing project that Auster has been developing for almost forty years, in several ways, as a poet, as a novelist and as a non-fiction writer. The complex notions of autobiography and memoir will be at the heart of our reflection, of course, and Auster's work will be seen in the larger context of the American tradition of self-writing.

HLABU07 Civilisation 3, construction identitaire dans le monde anglophone :
the construction of a Victorian identity

Mots-clés	Great-Britain, Queen Victoria, identity, History, representations
Contenu de l'enseignement	This course aims at examining the socio-cultural mechanisms which lead to the construction of the Victorian society. We will try to question how the so-called Victorians came to be, what triggered their social, political, economic, and military choices in the transitional period which led Britain (and the world) from a feudal society to a modern one. This course seeks to go beyond the history of 19 th century Britain to try to understand the general phenomenon that enables any given society to elaborate its "identity".
Niveau de l'enseignement	C2
Nombre de crédits	3
Compétences à acquérir	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • To master the historical and critical context of 19th century Britain. • To develop a critical eye on documents, as well as develop their specificity. • Understand the mechanisms of the identity construction of a society. • Decipher what is implicit in a text. • Structure an analysis in English.

HLABU08 Linguistique 2 / Linguistics 2 : stylistique / stylistics

Mots-clés	Stylistique, point de vue, pragmatique, analyse de discours Stylistics, point of view, pragmatics, discourse analysis
Contenu de l'enseignement	The aim of this course is to offer students the necessary toolkit in stylistics and pragmatics to analyse texts (both literary and non-literary). Part One of the course will present stylistics as a discipline and investigate how writers represent the perceptual and thinking/processing modes or point of view of their characters through distinctive linguistic patterns. Paul Simpson's model of point of view (1993) will be examined, as will other theoretical models. We will also study mind style (Fowler 1996): the use of deviant grammatical constructions used by writers to project a character's world view or a specific means of perceiving the world. Examples will include Neanderthals, children, and people with learning or social difficulties. Part Two will focus on reported speech and the expression of subjectivity, either in fiction (short stories and novels) or in the press. A stylistic approach will especially lay emphasis on the subtle choices adopted by an author or a journalist in the representation of direct speech in utterances of reported speech. La deuxième partie du cours portera sur le discours rapporté et l'expression de la subjectivité. L'analyse stylistique d'énoncés authentiques à partir d'un corpus rassemblant des extraits d'œuvres de fiction et des articles de presse montrera comment la subjectivité du locuteur rapporteur, qui construit la représentation de paroles ou de pensées d'un locuteur rapporté, peut être mise au jour dans les choix compositionnels d'occurrences de discours rapporté, notamment à partir d'énoncés de discours direct.
Niveau de l'enseignement	C2

HLABU09 Littérature 4 : voix minoritaires
American Women in Writing and the Visual Arts (1910-1940)

Mots-clés
Contenu de l'enseignement	This 12-week course explores women's role in the making of American literary modernism against the backdrop of the expanded field of the new modernist studies. It aims at introducing students to the main genres, important issues and key figures in women's writing during the years 1910-1940. The course takes as its point of departure the participation of women poets and artists in activism, the periodical press, and visual culture. We will then discuss issues of marginalization and vulnerability, focusing on the work of novelists such as Willa Cather, Nella Larsen, Katherine Anne Porter, and poets, such as Mina Loy. It is essential that you read the assigned readings before each class as well as recommended secondary resources and handouts. During the semester, keep up with updates on resources, additional material, bibliography, handouts, study questions, and session overviews. It is required that you come to class prepared, and bring your questions and ideas.
